Upcoming Exhibition: INAGRAL Exhibition III

A Ramble down the Tōkaidō Road

– Travelling with Hokusai along the Fifty-Three Stations

Highlights and the Exhibition

This is the First Public Exhibition of an Unknown Masterpiece! Hokusai painted his 53 series some 30 years before Hiroshige

Utagawa Hiroshige comes to mind when talking about the 53 Stations of the Tōkaidō, but Katsushika Hokusai also worked on a large number of the motif 30 years earlier, which stood out from those of other painters of the era. Unlike Hiroshige, who mainly painted landscapes, Hokusai painted small, detailed depictions of the customs of the land. In this exhibition, we'll be unveiling the precious Shunkyō Go Jū San-Da no Uchi, shozuri*set from Hokusai's 53 Stations of the Tōkaidō series (with half being exhibited in the first period and the other half in the second period). We introduce the many aspects of the world of Hokusai's 53 Stations, with exhibitions on every series, topic, and more. Succumb to the charm of Hokusai's unique 53 Stations of the Tōkaidō series in an exhibition made up of five distinct elements.

Shozuri:*

The word defines as first editions in modern publishing, and are the best condition woodblock prints, with finely carved detailed expressions. The intentions of the original artist are thus best reflected in terms of color, among other factors.

Exhibition Structure

1 Before Setting Off

With various Edo period ukiyo-e and literary works like Hishikawa Moronobu's A Charted Map of the Tokaido (National Museum of Japanese History collection), and Jippensha Ikku's Tōkaidōchū Hizakurige (General Library, The University of Tokyo collection), we introduce the Tōkaidō road as it was known among common folk of the day.

2 Hokusai's Masterpieces: The Tōkaidō Series

We exhibit Hokusai's Tōkaidō series from the Sumida Hokusai Museum collection. Unavailable anywhere else, shozuri set of the Shunkyo Go Ju San-Da no Uchi is a must-see.

3 Travelling the Tōkaidō with Hokusai

Exotic food and sights, mystical places and more! Hokusai's 53 Stations of the Tōkaidō is exhibited thematically here, without just sticking to the series and the post towns.

4 Flying Around the Tōkaidō with Hokusai

In a complete 180° turn for Hokusai, who up until now had focused on people in his Tōkaidō series, this is a surprising piece that shows the Tōkaidō road from Edo to Kyoto in one map from a bird's eye view. Take a look at these masterful bird's eye views from an age without tall buildings or planes.

5 After the Tōkaidō

Hokusai's depiction of the Tōkaidō, which was republished having changed it for years to come, beyond all recognition, shows us the longstanding popularity of Hokusai's 53 Stations of the Tōkaidō. We'll be exhibiting pieces on the Tōkaidō created by Hokusai's disciples, as well as works that were influenced by Hokusai's paintings so that the public can appreciate the legacy of Hokusai's work.
